Dear Friends,

One dictionary definition of learning is “gaining knowledge, understanding or skill by study, instruction or experience.” The College of Southern Idaho provides a multitude of opportunities to do just that, no matter your age or where your interests lie.

Here at the North Side Center, you can begin or continue your college experience close to home, saving time and money, by enrolling in one or more of over twenty academic courses offered in Gooding County. In our community education classes, you can learn new skills and expand your knowledge and understanding in areas ranging from gardening, cooking and quilting to dancing, yoga, photography and much, much more.

In addition, we’re pleased and excited to offer our free lecture series for a second year. “Lecture Series TwentyThirteen” is supported by a generous donation from Zions Bank. See page six for this year’s presenters and topics, and be sure to save the first Tuesday evening of February, March and April for these informative presentations.

With all of the opportunities available through the North Side Center, there is no better time than now to leap into lifelong learning!

Eating Local at Its Best

Idaho Preferred©—

You hear so much about the benefits of buying and eating locally, including fresher, better-tasting foods and stimulation of the community’s economy. Are you aware of the local producers right here in Gooding County? Here is your chance to meet four of them, Ballard Cheese, M & N Cattle, Howling Winds Farm, and Simon Boers, and learn about their operations and history. In addition, local chef Jane Deal, who has partnered with Idaho’s Department of Agriculture to write a cookbook featuring its Idaho Preferred© members, will demonstrate how to use these products to create tasty meals that you’ll sample during class.

Terrorism and Counter-Terrorism: The Long Road Ahead
With Dr. David Walker

Dr. Walker's lecture asks the audience to contemplate several important questions about international terrorism: Why might someone become a "suicide bomber"? Why attack unarmed random civilians? How does Al-Qaeda view their conflict with the US? Such questions ask listeners to understand America's adversaries. Some may question why that is important. Knowing the enemy can illuminate how difficult and complex a "War on Terror" can be, with no easy solutions, contrary to what is often spoken about in the American political arena.

Dr. David Walker is a lecturer at Boise State University, where he teaches classes in military and diplomatic history, as well as terrorism, world history, historiography and historical methodology. This program is also made possible by funding from the Idaho Humanities Council, the state affiliate of the National Endowment for the Humanities.

Out of the Sagebrush and Back Again: The Carey Land Act and Old Townsites in South Central Idaho
With Kelly Kast

Westward Ho! Thousands of pioneers trekked across the high plains, rugged mountains, and high desert steppes to reach the Pacific Coast, but few found Idaho worthy of settlement. As one pioneer voiced in his journal, Idaho was "an ugly, semi-arid wasteland of sagebrush and lava rock." Idaho's true potential wasn't realized until the Carey Act of 1894 allowed private capital to build dams and irrigation projects. As entrepreneurs headed west to capitalize on Idaho's "liquid gold," land speculators followed. These speculators developed town sites in hopes of enticing easterners to move west. At one time the Magic Valley boasted nearly 80 of these sites! Learn the remarkable story of those who did their best to take Idaho "out of the sagebrush."

Kelly Kast was born and raised in Gooding County, Idaho, and has spent many years researching and writing about the intriguing history of Southcentral Idaho. Kelly was a staff writer for the Gooding County Leader for seven years and its editor for three years. She has published many history articles with Idaho Magazine. Kelly currently works for the Idaho State Police and is researching and writing the history of the ISP for its 75th anniversary.

Ruins of a World: Chinese Gold Mining in the Snake River Canyon
With Ron James

This lecture focuses on the 1870s Chinese gold mining sites in the Snake River Canyon and the role they played in the modern development of southern Idaho.

Ronald James teaches English and Advanced Placement Literature and Composition at Canyon Ridge High School and is an adjunct Cultural Anthropology instructor at the College of Southern Idaho. He received his M.A. in Anthropology from the University of Idaho in 1993. James has done extensive archaeological and ethnographic research on the Chinese and Japanese contributions to southern Idaho history. His thesis, "Ruins of a World: Chinese Gold Mining in the Snake River Canyon," was published in 1993. Other publications include "Secrets of the Magic Valley and Hagerman's Remarkable Horse" (2002) in which James contributed chapters on the Native American, the Astorians and mining. James is also a member of the Twin Falls County Historic Preservation Commission.
